

White Gold Cushion Cut Diamond Solitaire Engagement Ring with Round Pavé Band and Prong Setting: Sparkle That Doesn't Stop at the Center Stone

A traditional solitaire puts all the attention on one diamond. The White Gold Cushion Cut Diamond Solitaire Engagement Ring with Round Pavé Band and Prong Setting takes that classic formula and extends the brilliance down the entire band, so the sparkle continues no matter where the eye lands. It's a design for shoppers who love the elegance of a solitaire silhouette but don't want to give up extra shimmer.

What "Pavé" Actually Means - and Why It's Harder Than It Looks

Pavé, pronounced pah-VAY, comes from the French word for "paved," and it describes a technique where tiny diamonds are set so closely together that the metal beneath practically disappears, leaving what looks like a continuous surface of light. It's one of the most labor-intensive setting styles in fine jewelry: each stone is individually placed and secured by hand under magnification, one at a time, along the entire band. In the White Gold Cushion Cut Diamond Solitaire Engagement Ring with Round Pavé Band and Prong Setting, that patience translates directly into how the ring catches light from every angle as the hand moves.

The Cushion Center, Elevated

The star of the ring is still the cushion cut center diamond, held in a classic prong setting that maximizes brilliance by exposing the stone to light from nearly all sides. Cushion cuts are known for their romantic, slightly softened glow compared to sharper modern cuts, and pairing that warmth with a glittering pavé band creates a beautiful contrast between the calm, substantial center stone and the lively detail surrounding it.

A Ring That Photographs and Wears Beautifully

One underrated benefit of a pavé band: it tends to photograph exceptionally well in the kind of close-up hand shots that dominate engagement announcements and wedding albums. The continuous line of small diamonds catches camera flash and natural light alike, giving the White Gold Cushion Cut Diamond Solitaire Engagement Ring with Round Pavé Band and Prong Setting a polished, professional look in every photo, no styling required.

Comfortable, Everyday Wearability

Despite the extra diamonds, the pavé band is set flush and low-profile, so it doesn't catch on clothing or gloves the way a raised setting might. This makes the ring genuinely practical for daily wear, not just special occasions - an important consideration for an engagement ring you'll have on your hand for years.

Hand-Set at Our New York Atelier

Every Cushion Cut Diamond Solitaire Engagement Ring with Round Pavé Band is crafted at Renaissance Jewel's atelier on 5th Avenue in Manhattan. Choose your center diamond - lab-grown or natural, IGI, GIA, or HRD-certified. Each order includes a free appraisal, complimentary insurance quote, one free resize within 30 days, and our lifetime warranty.

Ready to see the pavé difference for yourself? Visit the White Gold Cushion Cut Diamond Solitaire Engagement Ring with Round Pavé Band and Prong Setting page at Renaissance Jewel, select your certified center diamond, and preview your finished ring - free shipping and 30-day returns make the decision easy.