

White Gold Radiant Diamond Three Stone Pavé Band with Four Prong Setting: Read the Report, Love the Ring

White Gold Radiant Diamond Three Stone Pavé Band with Four Prong Setting offers a lot of ring for your budget, and it comes with a certified diamond you can verify yourself. In this guide, we'll show you the design's highlights and teach you a handy skill: reading a diamond certificate in about a minute.

Three Stones, One Statement

A three-stone design places two side stones beside a center diamond, creating a wide, balanced look. Add a pavé band, where small diamonds are set closely along the shank, and the sparkle continues around the finger. The radiant cut center has a rectangular outline and brilliant faceting, so it flashes with fire while staying modern and neat.

Why the White Gold Radiant Diamond Three Stone Pavé Band with Four Prong Setting Delivers Great Value

Lab-grown diamonds are real diamonds, grown in a controlled environment rather than mined. They match mined stones in appearance and composition, often at a friendlier price. That means a three-stone design, which uses more diamonds, can feel far more attainable. You can spend on size and quality rather than on the label.

How to Read the IGI Report for Your White Gold Radiant Diamond Three Stone Pavé Band with Four Prong Setting

An IGI certificate is like a diamond's report card. In about a minute, look for four things: carat weight (its size), color grade (how white it looks), clarity grade (the tiny natural characteristics inside), and the cut or finish details. Certified stones are typically laser-inscribed with a report number too, so you can match the paper to the diamond. Ask us anytime and we'll walk you through it.

Four Prongs, Clearly Explained

Prongs are the small metal claws that hold a diamond in place. Four prongs cover less of the stone than heavier settings, so more light enters and the diamond appears brighter. They also protect the radiant cut's corners. Our lifetime warranty includes prong inspection, cleaning and resizing.

Handcrafted With Care

Every White Gold Radiant Diamond Three Stone Pavé Band with Four Prong Setting is hand-set in our Fifth Avenue atelier in New York City. White gold provides a bright, neutral frame that lets each diamond shine. A free appraisal, complimentary insurance quote, free shipping and 30-day returns are part of every purchase. Resizing is easy too, with one complimentary resize included within 30 days of delivery, and sizes run from US 3 to 13.

Why Three Stones Look So Generous

Three stones spread sparkle across more of the finger, so the ring reads as substantial even when each diamond is modest. The pavé band continues that sparkle around the finger, so the ring never seems to end at the center stone.

Questions to Ask Before You Buy

Before buying any diamond ring, ask four simple questions. Is the diamond independently certified? What are its color and clarity grades? Is there a warranty? What is the return policy? At Renaissance Jewel the answers are yes, clearly listed, lifetime and 30 days. You can also request a free appraisal and insurance quote so your White Gold Radiant Diamond Three Stone Pavé Band with Four Prong Setting is protected from day one.
